SDG17: PARTNERSHIP FOR THE GOALS

17.4.3 Education for SDGs in the wider community

Description

At Sri Sri University (SSU), we are deeply committed to extending education for Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) to the wider community, including alumni, local residents, and displaced people. As part of this outreach, the university hosts various initiatives that engage the local community in sustainable practices. Through collaborations with farmers and local food producers, we provide them with access to modern agricultural techniques and organic farming practices. Programs such as the Krishi Vignan Kendra (KVK), Rural Agriculture Work Experience (RAW), and the Krushi Unnat Sahjogi (KUS) engage students in community-driven sustainability projects. These programs offer hands-on support to local farmers, helping them adopt sustainable agriculture practices and improve their livelihoods. Additionally, SSU organizes agricultural exhibitions, seminars, and guest lectures to share knowledge on topics such as organic farming, nutrition, and sustainable food production. By involving both students and the wider community, SSU fosters an inclusive environment where sustainable development practices are actively promoted, contributing to SDG targets on hunger, food security, and sustainable agriculture.
